Hand washing is a vital tool in preventing the spread of bacteria and viruses that can cause infections and foodborne illness. People can be a significant source of harmful microorganisms. Proper hand washing by food employees is necessary to control direct and indirect contamination of food, utensils, and equipment. Below is an example of a proper hand wash station for a temporary food event.